

ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

A method for removing contaminants from thermally cracked waste oil is disclosed. The thermally cracked oil is mixed with methanol at an elevated temperature and pressure to accelerate 5 the whole extraction process and to obtain better productivity and better quality of end product oil. The contaminants in methanol liquid phase are separated by flash evaporation and the resulting methanol solvent is recycled.